HOW TO RECLAIM A BRUTE.

I once picked up a man in the market-place. They said, "He is a brute; let him alone." I took him home with me, and kept the "brute" fourteen days and nights, through the delirium; and he nearly frightened my wife out of her wits, one night, chasing her all about the house, with a boot in hand; but she recovered her wits, and he recovered his.

He said to me, "You wouldn't think I had a wife and child?"

"Well, I shouldn't."

"I have, and—God bless her little heart—my little Mary is as pretty a little thing as ever stepped," said the "brute."

I asked, "Where do they live?"

"They live two miles away from here."

"When did you last see them?"

"About two years ago."

Then he told me his sad story.

I said, "You must go back again."

"I mustn't go back—I won't—my wife is better without me than with me. I will not go back any more. I have knocked her and kicked her and abused her. Do you suppose I will ever go back again?"

I went to the house with him. I knocked at the door, and the wife opened it.

"Is this Mrs. Richardson?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, this is Mr. Richardson. And Mr. Richardson, this is Mrs. Richardson. Now come into the house."

They went in. The wife sat on one side of the room, and the "brute" on the other. I waited to see who would speak first, and it was the woman. Before she spoke she fidgeted a great deal. She pulled up her apron till she got hold of the hem, and then pulled it all out again. Then she folded it all up closely, and jerked it through her fingers an inch at a time, and then she spread it down again, and then she looked all around the room, and said, "Well, William."

And the brute said, "Well, Mary."

He had a large handkerchief around his neck, and she said, "You had better take the handkerchief off, William; you'll need it when you go out."

He began to fumble about it. The knot was large enough; he could have untied it if he liked, but he said, "Will you untie it, Mary?"

And she worked away at it; but her fingers were clumsy, and couldn't get off; their eyes met, and their love-light was not all quenched; she turned her arms gently, and he fell into them. If you had seen those white arms clasped about his neck, and he, sobbing on her breast, and the child looking in wonder first at the one and then at the other, you would have said, "It is not a brute; it is a man with a great, big, warm heart in his breast."—Ex.

WHAT A BLIND MAN DID.

John Metcalf was a native of the West Riding of Yorkshire, born in the year 1717, only a few miles from Harrowgate. He lost his sight, from the effects of the measles, when four years old, and very shortly became totally blind—utterly unconscious of light. His first efforts towards sustaining himself were made upon the violin. He became an expert performer on the instrument, when a mere boy, and for many years attended as a musician at the "Queen's Head," in High Harrowgate. At the age of five-and-twenty he had saved money enough with which to purchase a wheeled carriage and horses, for the conveying of people to and from places of amusement. A few years later he sold his horses, and enlisted as a musician in Colonel Thornton's Volunteers, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Falkirk. He was soon released, however, and returned to Knaresborough, where he was born, and commenced the business of a common carrier between that town and York, a distance of sixteen miles; and while thus engaged he served as a guide at night through the intricate passes, or when the tracks were covered with snow. As might be expected, strangers often hesitated about placing themselves under the guidance of a man so utterly blind that even the glare of the sunlight upon the snow was not perceptible to him; but he never failed them. Over the trackless waste he would conduct the traveler where, as far as the eye could reach, only a sheet of unbroken and unmarked snow lay upon the earth; and he never went wrong, and never hesitated. But more than this; at the age of forty he could follow the chase as well and as keenly as the rest. He had his own horses, and he could follow those hounds as surely as the keenest-sighted man of the county. John Metcalf was on a visit to his native place in the year 1788, being then 71 years of age—healthy, rugged and strong. He had come from Huddersfield in Yorkshire, where he had just finished the building of a piece of road, and the construction of a splendid bridge.

FORBEARANCE.

It is in our daily associations with other people, whether in society, in business, or at home, that we are in the deepest need. We are irritated at countless things, and seem goaded on to utter bitter words, or spiteful allusions, or stinging repartees. We see error so plainly that we long to crush it out by violent means, or we see faults in others which seem to merit our severest rebuke. Or we are suffering under some real or fancied unkindness or injustice which we burn to resent, and which appears to us to warrant the sternest indignation. The forbearance which while enduring these heart-burnings, can enforce silence on the lips until the hot emotions have had time to cool, commands our respect and admiration.

NAMES TAKEN FROM TRADES.

The Baxters belong to the same class as the Masons, the Carpenters, the Taylors, the Smiths, the Gardiners, and the Fullers. In fact, the surnames derived from trades or occupations are more numerous than those of any other class, except patronymics and place-names. Some of them belong to existing trades, like those quoted above; while others represent obsolete trades, or at least obsolete trade terminology, like the Fletchers, or arrow makers, the Arblasters, who manufactured crossbows or arblasts, and the Tuckers, who worked in the tucking mills where cloth was prepared for market. Those who wish for further information upon these subjects cannot do better than turn to Mr Bardsley's excellent and systematic works on English surnames. A man who bakes is called a Baker; but in earlier times a woman who bakes was called a Bakester, or Baxter. So a man who brews is a Brewer, while a woman who brews is a Brewster. In Medieval English the termination "ster" was a feminine one; and it still survives with its primitive signification in spinster. A huckster was originally a market woman, but the word has now come to mean anybody, male or female, who hawks about goods in the public streets. The same change has come over maltster, throwster, and many other analogous words. But sundry surnames will show us the two forms side by side, as in Webber and Webster. Hence we may conclude that the ancestor of all the Baxters was a woman who kept a bakehouse. Why her descendants should take their name from her, rather than from their father, is easy enough to understand on a number of natural hypotheses. Joan Baxter may in one place have been a widow woman, whose children, would, of course, be called after her; in another place she might be a person of some character, while her husband was a field laborer or a ne'er-do-well, and in another, again, there might be two Piers Gardeners or two Wat Carters in the same village, so that it might be more convenient to describe the youngsters by their mother's calling than by their father's.—Cornhill Magazine.

GOOD COFFEE.
Everybody wants it, but very few get it, because most people do not know how to select coffee, or it is spoiled in the roasting or making. To obviate these difficulties has been our study. Thurber's packages coffees are selected by an expert who understands the art of blending various flavors. They are roasted in the most perfect manner (it is impossible to roast well in small quantities), then put in pound packages (in the bean, not ground,) bearing our signature as a guarantee of genuineness, and each package contains the Thurber recipe for making good Coffee. We pack two kinds, Thurber's "No. 34," strong and pungent; Thurber's "No. 41," mild and rich. One or the other will suit every taste. They have the three great points, good quality, honest quantity, reasonable price. Ask your Grocer for Thurber's roasted Coffee in pound packages, "No. 34" or "No. 41." Do not be put off with any other kind—your own palate will tell you what is best.
Where persons desire it, we also furnish the "Ideal" Coffee-pot, the simplest, best and cheapest coffee-pot in existence. Grocers who sell our Coffee keep them. Ask for descriptive circular.
Respectfully, &c.,
H. K. & F. B. THURBER & CO.,
Importers, Wholesale Grocers and Coffee Roasters, New York.
P. S.—As the largest dealers in food products in the world, we consider it our interest to manufacture only pure and wholesome goods and pack them in a tidy and a satisfactory manner. All goods bearing our name are guaranteed to be of superior quality, pure and wholesome, and dealers are authorized to refund the purchase price in any case where customers have cause for dissatisfaction. It is therefore to the interest of both dealers and consumers to use Thurber's brands.

Teas and Coffees.
Bosch's celebrated Compressed Coffee is just the article for the Holidays. It is a full, rich-flavored coffee, and to preserve its aroma we pack it in air tight packages immediately after it is roasted and ground. These packages contain five pounds nett weight. We can sell you the same coffee by the pound. Good coffee from 15 to 25 cents per pound. We would also call especial attention to our New Formosa Tea. This tea contains that rich, spicy flavor so much sought after by lovers of a really fine tea. We are selling it at the remarkably low price of from 40 to 50 cents per pound. Congou or English Breakfast, the finest ever imported, at $1 per pound. There is no tea like it in this city.

DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC.
A combination of Protoiodide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, no characteristic of other iron preparations.
GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in all cases in which it is applicable, and in my twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy has in my hands made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this agreeable and harmless remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation made. In fact, every compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice. DR. ROBERT J. MARTIN.
ST. LOUIS, MO., NOV. 15th, 1881. 2104 Locust Avenue.
It gives color to the blood, natural health at time to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.
